

CaseCo Dream Makers

One of the more common tag lines that you will find in companies marketing slogan's today is "Family owned and Operated since...". Its purpose is to build a connection to ownership, conveying values like quality, tradition and personal commitment to customers. Sometimes and probably more often, those are just words with very little backing. That's not the case for CaseCo.

Our family was delt a tough hand, when our 10-year-old daughter Charlotte was diagnosed with Osteosarcoma (bone cancer). When asked what her Make-a-wish was said she wanted to have her own very own treehouse. We have been told these projects take a lot of time to put together, not just months but often over a year to plan. Our situation didn't allow for that timing and instead of months Caseco delivered in weeks. This project was going to be a tall task for whomever decided to take it on, and that's without the timing constraints. Charlotte has developed a level of perfection from watching Nelson treehouse builders on TV for years, not to mention she worked with an actual architect (Stephen Grotz) in designing it herself.

CaseCo Companies, who we had no prior knowledge of, poured their hearts and souls into this small little project so our little girls dreams could come true. The owners and their collective teams took time away from their families, during a weekend I might add, to complete this project. Epitomizing what it means to be family owned and operated. This company does outstanding work on enormous residential and commercial properties and could have easily taken shortcuts, but they didn't. They took that same quality, integrity and commitment to our small 250 square foot project and made dreams come true!

CaseCo you and your team are true Dream Makers, and we will forever be grateful for you.

Love, The Evans/Team Charlotte
